Diquan Williams to serve 65 years for murder of two-year-old Cameron Parks

(Indianapolis, Ind.) Marion County Prosecutor Terry Curry announced today that Diquan Williams has been sentenced to serve 55 years in the Indiana Department of Correction and 10 years in Marion County Community Corrections for the murder of two-year-old Cameron Parks. Cameron died on October 17, 2015, and the cause of death was determined to be multiple blunt force injuries. Williams was the boyfriend of the child's mother and responsible for his care when the fatal injuries were inflicted.

"We are pleased that Williams will spend most, if not all, of his adult life in prison for the unimaginable horror and death experienced by Cameron Parks," Prosecutor Curry said when Williams entered his guilty plea in January 2017.

The child's mother, Dominique Parks, pleaded guilty in June 2016 to Neglect of a Dependent Causing Death (Level 1 Felony) for knowingly placing her child in a situation that endangered his life and health. She is serving a 20-year sentence, with 14 years served in the Indiana Department of Correction and six years to be served through Marion County Community Corrections.
